he sensational story of the destruction of the great Russian ammunition factory at Okhta, a suburb of Petrograd, recently published by the Northliffe newspapers, was foreshadowed ons the other day by Sir John A. Simon, secretary for home affairs, to a question. The home secretary said the story had been published without eing submitted to the censor and he added that the fact had been brought to the notice of the public prosecutor.

The story in question said thousands of workmen were killed when the factory was blown to pieces last April and that the destruction of the plant caused such an extreme dearth of ammunition that nothing could be done by the Russians against the German artillery. A dispatch from Petrograd at the time of the explosion said several persons had been killed and many others injured and much material damage had been done as a result of the explosion.

Thinks It Might Not Be Wise to Convene Senate at the Present Time.

there are eyes and cars and noses watching, listening, smelling everywhere all the time. Now, supposing that when you were sure that nobody saw you somebody did see you visit my house. Or supposing Reddy Fox just happened to run across your tracks and followed them to my house. It wouldn't be your fault if something dreadful happened to us, and yet you would be the cause of it. You remember what I told you the other day, that there are some things it is better not to know."

Peter looked very thoughtful and pulled his whiskers while he turned this over in his mind. "That is a new idea to me," said he at last. "I never had thought of it before. I certainly never would be able to forgive myself if anything happened to you because of me." ROANOKE, Va., September 23 .- " should be amended before the regular the opinion that an extra session could be called in October. However, since ency of an extra session. "Of course, you wouldn't," replied Bob White. "No more would I ever be able to forgive myself if anything happened to my family because I had told some one where my home is."

Peter nodded. "Of course, if I should just happen to find your home all by myself you wouldn't be angry, would you?" he asked.

Bob White laughed. "Of course, not," said he. "Just the same, I would advise you not to try to find it. Then you will have nothing to trouble your mind if you should be followed and something dreadful happen to me or mine.
